Washington, August 25.—Congress is in perfect accord with the President in his demands upon Huerta. At the conference with the members of the Foreign Relations Committees of both houses of Congress at the White House to-night he read his message, together with the note conveyed to Envoy Lind and the reply of liuerta.

The President admitted to his advisers that the mission of Lind is a complete failure, but said that Lind would remain in Mexico to await whatever may develop.

The demands carried by Lind, which conveyed the distinguished consideration and esteem of the President were as follows:

1. That there must be an armistice.

2. That there must an honest and fair election by which all factions must abide.

3. That Huerta must not be candidate at such elections. Homespuns, wool crash and unfinished worsteds reduced the same way-to

The President recommends to the people the exercise of patience, and says that he still expects the situation to be worked out along peaceful lines.

Although the President outlines no further negotiations or steps in the pacification of Mexico, he discusses the neutrality laws, and takes the position that they should be enforced as to all factions.

It is emphasized that under no consideration will there be recognition of Huerta, and it was made equally emphatic that there will be no armed intervention.

The President leaves no doubt whatever as to his position on the question of enlisting the aid of foreign nations in the settlement of the problem. Standing behind the orchestra rall in the Lyric Theatre, the beautiful little theatre which his energy and courage had created, Jake Wells yesterday watched two audiences from the grand old State of Alissouri become convinced that high-class vaudeville was what they had been wanting all the time. Not only are the leather-cushioned seats unusually the leather-cushioned seats unusually comfortable, but there is not one from which the whole stage may not be seen, so great is the "rake," or slope, of orchestra, balcony and gallery, and, either by grace of fortune or through the skill of the architect, the acoustic properties of the house are perfect.
